The Kansas City Artists Coalition is hosting Lynn Peters May 21 – July 22, 2017

Lynn Peters is a professor of sculpture, ceramics and design, currently teaching at Moraine Valley Community College in Chicago, IL. Lynn has worked in the art industry doing architectural restoration and in her own business making pottery for retail and wholesale markets.

She studied at Sheridan School of Design, NY State University at Alfred and Rutgers University; and has completed traditional apprenticeships, both in production pottery making and mold and model making.

Nomadic by nature, she travels and works between Toronto, NYC, and Chicago.

“My work is wall mounted narrative ceramic sculpture and my studio is like a cabinet of curiosities, a kind of memory theater where I pitch camp with open journals and images on the walls, tables and floor. From my archive comprising thousands of pages from countless sources, I create vignettes with vintage ceramics and maquettes that I arrange and rearrange in a Dada-Joseph-Cornell-like construction, which is in flux for a while.

My written journals include records of conversations, capturing dialogues snatched at random. I document clichés and other phrases that are ambiguous, indirect missives commemorating the plainspoken, bootstraps wisdom of the pioneer spirit reflected in the early 20th Century.”
